In-House Management Consulting: your gateway to in-house consulting

The job:

Independent, management-related project work with a strategic emphasis on Commerz Business Consulting.

Getting started:

As one of the leading banks in Europe, Commerzbank has a bright future ahead of it. Commerz Business Consulting is the bank's in-house management consulting service. It offers university graduates with a strong analytical and strategic aptitude the opportunity to combine challenging banking projects and management consulting. You will have the chance to shape the Group and work with dedicated colleagues on completing demanding assignments in a range of areas.

What we expect from you:

You have a good degree in economics, social sciences, the arts or engineering. You also have project management experience gained in banking, management or strategic consulting. You are used to thinking analytically and can see the big picture; you also enjoy conceptually demanding tasks. You make a convincing and committed impression and can state your case as fluently in English as in German.

What happens next:

We encourage you to act on your own initiative. When you have developed your personal skill set and methodological knowledge you will support project planning and analysis from conception to presenting your results and subsequent implementation. You can also test and expand your analytical ability by developing innovative solutions to complex problems. Working on Group-wide projects, you will build up a network of interesting contacts. It's the best start you could have to your dream career.

Selection procedure and deadlines for applications:

Multi-level structured interview process, applications accepted all year round.
